Green Are the Hills Far Away Kathleen O'Toole O'Connell
Kathleen O’Toole and Paddy O’Connell, both from Ballinrobe, Co. Mayo, married in 1947. Kathleen’s childhood as “the red one on the hill” had earned her countless beatings from her teacher-nuns and her widowed mother; but her spirit survived undaunted. With Paddy, Kathleen found genuine happiness—and against the medical odds, gave birth to Kathryn and Mary.
A few months before her death in 1988, Kathleen wrote a short memoir. It painted a vivid picture of Ballinrobe in the 1920s; the Irish experience in England during WWII; and life as an RAF wife, including two postings to Cyprus. The memoir, which she called Green Are the Hills Far Away, took the form of a letter to her daughters, Kathryn O’Connell and Mary Monaghan. Mary Monaghan rediscovered the journal just before launching her book; ‘Remember Me?’ and she then incorporated excerpts from it in her second book, ‘Who Do You Belong To?’
Realising that it was a valuable record of the social history of Ballinrobe Kathryn and Mary decided to publish ‘Green Are the Hills Far Away’, together with many photos of days gone by, as a tribute to their mother’s memory; an unabashed account of a bold, spirited life lived to the full.
