For God, Country, and the Thrill of It: Women Airforce Service Pilots in World War II (Charles and Elizabeth Prothro Texas Photography Series) Anne Noggle
"In 1943 the Army Air Forces began training women to fly military planes stateside -- ferrying them from the factory, towing targets for aerial and antiaircraft gunnery practice, and test-flying. Of the more than 25,000 women who applied for training, fewer than 2,000 were accepted and 1,074 won their wings as Women Airforce Service Pilots (WASPS). Here is a beautifully produced photographic record of these extraordinary pioneers, of what took place in their training and service, of their risks and skills, of the vibrant life they shared, and of the intense bonding they experienced living and working so closely together, performing dangerous duties....In the fall of 1986 the WASPS held a reunion at their old training field....The forty-nine strong, duotone portraits and thirty-nine historical shots presented here pay fir tribute to the WASPs..."
