This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1904 Excerpt: ...be ascertained, Mr. Levi enjoyed the most remarkable distinction in the history of the Jews of America, for it is not on record whether or not any other Jew had the fortune of being the first citizen of any other state in the Union. In the history of Jefferson county, Iowa, an account is given of one D. Morris, who had come from South Carolina and laid claim to a tract of land in the western part of that-_ county near Locust Grove, and he surprised all the neighbors by being the most favored white settler among the Indians, though he never gave the latter a taste of liquor. Mr. Morris appears to have been a Jew from every trace which is left behind him, and the fact that even unto this day the traveler meets quite a number of families bearing the name of Morris, and most of them assert to belong to one family which tame hither from England along with the others who landed in Savannah, Ga., removes the least doubt, and he certainly was the first Jewish farmer in Iowa. The early settlers of Iowa appear to have manifested great interest in the Jewish people (which in itself is an indication that they were. quite familiar with some of them) particularly were the fair daughters of Israel great favorites of the Iowa pioneers. In "The Iowa Sun" (August 28, 1839) a writer of no mean ability endeavors quite elaborately to create a new theory about the Jewish women in the following language: "The unexcelled beauty of the daughters of Israel might be traced to the legend that Jesus the Jew gave his last glance upon them, and, as they were not as stubborn in denouncing him, the rays of light which rested upon his fase reflected upon them and they remained beautiful forever." Strange as this assertion appears, yet it seems to have been well taken by ...
