The only thing Allison wants to do is stay home for a while and prepare a nursery. However, as an agent for Anastasia, Interpol's anti-terrorist organization, it's not that simple. After her mother breaks her leg and can't attend an important symposium, Allison is tagged to fill in. But from the moment she arrives in Armenia, it seems someone is determined to keep her from fulfilling her assignments–permanently.

When Allison's husband Bart telephones to warn her that al Qaeda terrorists are headed her way, all communications are shut down before she can discover who can help her escape. Bart and Allison are plunged into a holy war against a terrorist threat that wants Armenia for its next stronghold. Can Anastasia and the small band of ill-trained rebels prevent the takeover?
