Guy De Lusignan

French-speaking Africa Since Independence (Library of African Affairs) Guy De Lusignan
The author analyzes the process of decolonialization, as seen first from Paris and then from Africa. He explains the reasons why and the means by which French policy was pushed, at an ever increasing pace, towards accepting the independence of the colonies; he gives an account of the way in which power was handed over and also outlines the problems which faced the new states. - from the inside flap
