Harold L Schoen

Growing Up, Black & White Edition Harold L Schoen
2016 FINALIST NEXT GENERATION INDIE BOOK AWARD Hal Schoen spent his childhood in the 1940s and 1950s in a large (13 children) western Ohio farm family of limited economic means. At first the farm had no electricity and was operated with workhorses, and he recalls communal threshing rings and many chores on a farm in transition to the use of more modern methods and equipment. The farm also served as a huge playground for young children, and Hal relates many fond memories of play on the farm including sports that he and his siblings enjoyed – baseball, softball and basketball. The source for another set of memories was his elementary and high school experiences, including in sports. No one in his family before him had attended college, but as he grew older and taller circumstances fell into place that made it possible for him to attend the University of Dayton on a provisional basketball scholarship. He was successful in his class work at Dayton, and his basketball memories are of a journey from struggling to make the nationally prominent UD Flyers, to benchwarmer, to starting forward on legendary coach Tom Blackburn's first and only National Invitation Tournament (NIT) championship team in 1962. The following year Hal was senior captain of the Flyers.
