Someone Like Me Greg Bolen
A Psychological Thriller by Greg Bolen The FBI office in Washington D.C. holds a secret. Graham Boyce has the perfect life working as an FBI agent and being promoted to deputy director. However, when he is getting followed and realized with astonishment, that the man that follows him looks familiar, or more precisely, the man looks exactly like him, he begins to realize that things are not quite as they seem for Graham Boyce. He is in love with Lora Kendricks, the daughter of the Senator, but her birthday leaves Graham with some startling questions about his past, and he sets off to the Senators apartment to find some answers. At first, the Senator and his boss the FBI director are welcoming. He is intrigued by the curiously fake Graham Boyce that pretends to be him. However, after he introduces himself as the genuine, Graham slowly finds himself drawn into a web of secret conspiracies and perhaps, even a double identity, someone like him. Can Graham resist to kill the double and uncover the secret of the other, before it’s too late, or will his demise let him disappear without a trace? Greg Bolen described his objectives for the book: “I want to place the reader into the body of Graham Boyce with this book and to make the experience of the reader’s imagination, from beginning to end, an absolutely personal one.”
